

Include information about the weather conditions you would expect in Alaska at this time of year.
Fahrenheit? Celsius?

Mush! Iditarod 2007 Begins!

By A. Reporter.

Write a report about the history of Iditarod—the Last Great Race on Earth. Who are some of the famous names associated with the Iditarod?

Write about the landscapes, animals, weather conditions and hardships that are faced by the mushers and their sled dogs.

How long does the race go for? How much distance is travelled? Where does it begin and end? What are some of the checkpoints in between?

Include a map of the Iditarod course.

What are some of the interesting rules and strategies used by the mushers?

When you add a picture, make sure you add a description underneath it, like this.

Buser Speaks.

Write a profile of a musher competing in Iditarod 2007. Or you could conduct an imaginary interview with your musher. Include a photo and any interesting facts.

Iditarod musher, Martin Buser

Awesome Alaska.

By Jour Nalist.

Write a profile on the state of Alaska. Include information about its history, its people and its culture.

What sights would you recommend to tourists?
What do people like to do there?

Provide information about the wildlife and environment you would find in Alaska.

Be sure to include a map that shows it in relation to North America.

FAST FACTS

- Use dot points to list some fast facts about Alaska.
- This could be facts and figures, like population, temperature etc.
- It could be quirky, fun information.

Man's Best Friend?—My Opinion.

By Ed E. Torr.

Write an opinion piece about the Alaskan Husky. After finding out some facts about the dogs (such as physical characteristics, needs, personalities) and the relationships between them and their trainers, express your thoughts and opinions about this statement: The Iditarod is cruel to dogs. Use facts, interviews and evidence to support your opinions.

Create a snappy advertisement designed to catch the attention of an Iditarod musher.